

BUSINESS INSIDER

These pictures show all the crazy places the Berlin Wall ended up around the world

Talia Avakian
Aug. 18, 2015, 12:07 PM  33,417

 FACEBOOK  LINKEDIN  TWITTER  EMAIL  PRINT

More than 25 years since the fall of the Berlin Wall, which once separated East Berlin from West Berlin, hundreds of the wall's portions stand scattered in countries throughout the world.

In fact, more pieces of it actually reside in other countries than in Berlin — or Germany — itself, according to The Guardian.

We've put together a collection of images that show where pieces of the wall stand today and how they look in different countries, from a segment gifted to Nelson Mandela in South Africa to a massive display in Los Angeles.

View As: One Page | Slides

Two segments of the Berlin Wall reside in the Hilton Anatole in Dallas, Texas.